Relationships

The request comes in and is handles by the express router where the request path is used to by the router to determine further action, invoked by the middleware. The controller is responsible, for evoking the necessary functions on and for the request as determined by the router. After the controller is finished processing the requests intent, a status response is sent along with data the was requested or a request is sent to the MongoDB.

HTTP Request

Express Router

Middleware

HTTP Response

Controller

Middleware

MongoDB